City of Auburn

Auburn's ISO Fire Rating Improves

The Insurance Service Office (ISO) recently released a new Public Protection Classification (PPC) for the City of Auburn, rating the effectiveness of local fire protection. The new report improves the City's rating from a Class 3/9, assigned in 2008, to a Class 2/2X.

The first part of the rating (Class 2) applies to structures within 5 miles of a fire station and within 1,000 feet of a water source, such as a fire hydrant. The second part of the rating (2X) applies to structures within 5 miles of a fire station, but farther than 1,000 feet from a water source. The Class 2 designation puts the City of Auburn in the top 2.4% of the nation for fire protection.

In addition to providing information on the quality of our Fire service, an important role the ISO rating plays is to help insurance companies to determine fire insurance rates. According to the ISO:

"a community's investment in fire mitigation is a proven and reliable predictor of future fire losses. Statistical data ... bears out the relationship between excellent fire protection - as measured by the PPC program - and low fire losses. So, insurance companies use PPC information for marketing, underwriting, and to help establish fair premiums for homeowners and commercial fire insurance. In general, the price of fire insurance in a community with a good PPC grade is substantially lower than in a community with a poor PPC grade."

ISO looks at many factors when assigning a rating, including distribution of fire stations, manpower, water supply and communications capabilities. The Auburn Fire Division seeks to reduce fire losses in a number of additional ways not measured by the ISO including strong code enforcement and routine fire inspections of existing buildings. Losses are also minimized through excellent response times. In 2015, the Auburn Fire Division had an average response time of less than four minutes for 4,959 calls.

Staff from the Fire Division and the Information Technology Department's GIS Division have worked together to develop and maintain a system of response zones and "fastest route" calculations to assist in responding to calls efficiently. Similarly, the Auburn Interactive Growth Model is used to estimate Auburn's growth to help plan for future fire stations and maintain Auburn's excellent ISO rating. Finally, the Water Resource Management department manages a well-maintained, high-quality water infrastructure that is a crucial part of fire protection.

Of the rating improvement, Auburn Fire Chief John Lankford made the following statement:

"The Fire Division's goal is to continually improve the level of response to the citizens we serve."

"I am proud to announce that the Auburn Fire Division has improved its ISO rating. This rating was improved through several very important factors. First was the City Council's support by committing to the purchase of new apparatus and equipment. Our entire staff is dedicated to the mission of providing quality emergency services, and much of the criteria for this rating is directly related to the great work and dedication the firefighters have to daily training, quick and efficient response times, and to providing the best service possible. Additionally our Communications Division score improved and the Water Resource Management Department was vital in their role in fire protection. The Fire Division's goal is to continually improve the level of response to the citizens we serve."

"In 2015, the Auburn Fire Division had an average response time of less than four minutes for 4,959 calls."

Educational Kiosk installed at Auburn Public Library

The Alabama Clean Water Partnership, a statewide non-profit organization focused on stormwater education, has teamed up with the Auburn Public Library to place an educational, touch screen computer kiosk programmed with fun, water-related educational games at the Library. The Water Cycle, Watersheds, Stormwater Pollution, and Nutrient Enrichment are topics highlighted through kiosk games, meant to educate all ages.

Sabrina Clark Wood, Tallapoosa River Basin Facilitator for the Alabama Clean Water Partnership said, "We are excited to partner with the Library! This is a great opportunity for the Clean Water Partnership to be involved with local youth to help share the importance of water quality and specifically pollutants that can be harmful. Drop by the library, bring your children or grandchildren and visit the kiosk soon."

The kiosk was installed by the Alabama Clean Water Partnership in partnership with the Auburn Public Library, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Region 4, Alabama Department of Environmental Management, Mobile Bay National Estuary Program, and Hamline University's Center for Global Environmental Education, St. Paul, MN. ## 911 Facts and Tidbits

Did You Know?

- The first 9-1-1 call made in the United States was in Haleyville, AL in 1968.
- The City of Auburn 9-1-1 Center handled almost 140,000 total phone calls in 2015.
- Auburn 9-1-1 operators use devices called TTY/TDD to communicate with callers who may be deaf or speech impaired.
- You should never make prank calls to 9-1-1. Not only is it against the law, you could be tying up the line for someone who has an actual emergency.
- The City of Auburn adopted 9-1-1 as the emergency number in 1988.
- Always be able to tell the operator your exact location when dialing 9-1-1, especially when using a cellphone.
- A deactivated cellphone can still be used to dial 9-1-1. Young children should be supervised when allowed to play with old cellphones to avoid accidentally dialing 9-1-1.
- Auburn 9-1-1 uses a service called LanguageLine to assist operators with interpretation of over 200 foreign languages during 9-1-1 phone calls.
- Citizens that subscribe to a VOIP service are encouraged to keep the home address of the account up to date to ensure 9-1-1 calls are routed to the proper authorities.
- If you dial 9-1-1 by mistake, please stay on the line to inform the operator it was an accident. This will avoid an unnecessary response of emergency personnel to your address.
